GARDEN ARCHITECTURE

Andrew Crace Planters

Andrew Crace's designs were influenced by Indian and Japanese architectures during his visit to India and Japan in 1980's. Andrew Crace also converted wheelbarrows into attractive and comfortable wheelbarrow seats and chairs. His classic designs are influenced by the great masters such as Frederick Crace, J P White and Sir Edwin Lutyens.

All of Andrew Crace's garden furniture is made in his workshop in the Much Hadham country side. Most of the production processes are handmade by local highly skill machinists and craftsmen. They do not operate mass production but each piece is individually made. Emphasis is always on the strength of the construction and ensuring that all the component parts fit perfectly and beautifully together to produce elegant furniture for your home and garden.

Andrew Crace uses 2 different timbers. FSC certified Iroko which can be left natural or painted, and English Oak which is usually left unpainted. A wide choice of colours is available, please ask for further details.

The Baroque Planters are similar to Versailles Planters, but have thicker legs, larger balls and wider matching. Glass reinforced plastic (Glass fibre) liners are available to protect the wood - these liners sit on an internal ledge and the top rail, drainage is from a hole positioned at a lower level of the liner base to ensure that all the water issues away from the timber. The Baroque planters use the same size of linings as the Versailles planters.
